

INGEAR

Get Into the Groove

Finally, a recordable CD with a little soul. With its vinyl grooves and paper paste-on label, Verbatim's new line of CD-Rs recalls the heyday of the 45. But unlike those records from your childhood, these recordable discs hold 80 minutes of music.

Best of all, there are no B-sides.

Verbatim Digital Vinyl CDs, US$5 per 10-pack;

www.verbatim.com.

Circle 291 on reader service card.

To Tell You the Truth

This portable lie detector uses voice-recognition technology to measure variations in the stress levels of a person's voice. As a person starts to fib, an LED apple slowly disappears to reveal a worm. Catch someone telling a real whopper, and a pot blows its lid. Accuracy is claimed to be 84 percent.

Handy Truster Portable Lie Detector, US$35; www.handytruster.com.

Circle 292 on reader service card.

A Sweeter Berry

Like the best berries, the Java-based 6210 is small and sweet. It's smaller and lighter than its predecessors, but sports increased memory and support for wireless email synchronization and integrated attachment viewing.

Additional features include email, phone, SMS, browser, and organizer applications. RIM Blackberry 6210, US$400; www.blackberry.com.

Circle 294 on reader service card.

Nothing Trivial

Right down to the pie wedges, Zebra Hill Corporate Games re-creates the look and feel of the classic board game Trivial Pursuit. But instead of testing employees' knowledge of science, sports, and the arts, this version contains 1200 questions of custom content developed for your organization. It's a fun and effective training and sales promotion tool.

Trivial Pursuit Deluxe Edition, US$25 per game, minimum 5000 games. Additional card packs available; www.zebrahillgames.com.

Circle 293 on reader service card.

