

Performance appraisals that work!

What makes a performance appraisal system successful, and an appraisal discussion objective and fair? In a word, skill. DDI's performance appraisal/goals and standards training options (part of the Interaction Management system) help supervisors plan and conduct positive, future-directed appraisals that actually improve employee performance.

No one offers a better or broader capability to meet training and development needs than DDI. We've led the field since 1970 in supervisor and manager training, productivity improvement, assessment and selection. Write or call and we'll show you why.

Retire Easy: The Bluebook of Retirement Planning

Thomas L. Nolan, Jr. believes a comfortable, secure retirement isn't an impossible dream. He has found that people need hard facts about retirement planning, investing and economics—in layman's terms. With chronic inflation and recession, a threatened Social Security system and tight money, people find it hard to save. Too many Americans are unable to put enough money aside for the future and don't understand how they can make their money work for them—they are victimized by their own financial ignorance. Retire Easy is a resource for this information. 275 pp. $9.00 Natural Press.

Managing Human Forces in Organizations

Authors Madeline Heilman and Harvey Hornstein encourage managers to formulate practical answers to employee problems. Quality control circles, organization development, behavior modification in organizations, co-determination, autonomous work groups and bias based on sex, race or age are among topics discussed. The book is organized by managerial problems, not organizational behavior. Power, politics and competition are examined, citing benefits as well as cost to the company. Managing Human Forces in Organizations shows managers how to understand what is happening to employees, how to correct problems and how to motivate workers. 264 pp. $17.50. Dow Jones-Irwin.
